

Learning from the past, looking to the future.

Workplace safety, and mine safety in particular, have come a long way since the Springhill Mine disaster in 1958. And yet, unfortunately, workplace accidents still happen every day in Nova Scotia.

Fifty years after this event, please take a moment to be thankful to the men and women whose efforts have made our workplaces so much safer than they were then, and to thank those who make the effort to ensure our workplaces are safe today and every day.

Think about how you, too, can play a role in workplace safety.

In recognition of the strength of spirit of the Town of Springhill.
In memory of the miners who have given their lives to their work.
In hope for safer workplaces now and into the future.

WORK SAFE. FOR LIFE.

Read about Nova Scotia's new Underground Mining Regulations, and participate in public consultation on the Internal Responsibility System at www.gov.ns.ca/lwd/healthandsafety

NOVA SCOTIA
Labour and Workforce Development