Nova Scotian Community Wind Power Investment Fund Issues Share Offering

New Annan, NS – January 8th, 2007 – The Colchester-Cumberland Wind Field Inc., one of the community development corporations collectively referred to as the Scotian WindFields has been authorized to issue shares under the Nova Scotia's Community Economic Development Investment Fund (CEDIF) initiative of the NS Department of Economic Development. The Scotian WindFields are a network of eight community corporations throughout Nova Scotia working towards the shared vision of generating wind energy for sale in the province.

Investments in a CEDIF are eligible as a RRSP contribution and for 30% non-refundable Nova Scotia Equity Tax Credit against Nova Scotia taxes payable if held for 5 years. Shareholders may qualify for subsequent tax credits in the 6th (20%) and 11th (10%) year after making the initial investment if the CEDIF meets the additional requirements under the NS Equity Tax Credit legislation to qualify the CEDIF's shareholders for these tax credits (see subsequent tax credits in Item #15 of the glossary in the Offering Document).

The network of active community corporations has grown over 5 years to include The Bay Wind Field (Digby, Yarmouth and Annapolis), The Glooscap Wind Field (Kings, Hants East & West), Northumberland Wind Field (Pictou and Antigonish), Colchester-Cumberland Wind Field, Sou' Wester Wind Field (Queens, Shelburne, Lunenburg) and Chebucto Wind Field (Halifax Regional Municipality). The Gold Coast Wind Field (Guysborough) and Isle Wind Fields (Cape Breton) are currently seeking directors to round out their complement of local directors as per CEDIF regulations.

The Colchester-Cumberland Wind Field is authorized to raise up to 3 million per offering to dedicate to the development of wind energy in their communities. The share offerings will be available until March 1, 2007, the deadline to receive tax benefits for the 2006 taxation year. Shares are being sold for $1 with a minimum purchase of $1000.

Investments in Nova Scotian CEDIFs continue to grow with over $20 million of investments made by Nova Scotians today in such enterprises as a farm products storage facility, an arts centre, seniors housing and of course wind energy. "Through a CEDIF, communities can retain capital to invest in businesses which they want to support. It provides an opportunity to develop local pools of capital, which make all of their investment decisions within the community. Since their inception, these Funds have grown considerably and we expect this growth to continue for many years." says Chris Payne, Manager, Community Investment Funds for the Nova Scotia Department of Economic Development.

In keeping with their mandate to operate or invest in businesses in the renewable energy sector in Nova Scotia, four wind field community funds have made investments in Renewable Energy Services Ltd. (RESL), the NS company completing the erection of nine turbines this year in locations such as Goodwood, Point Tupper, River John, Brookfield, Fitzpatrick Mountain and Digby. Several CEDIFs have also made investments in Windsor, Nova Scotia-based Fourth Generation Capital Corporation who is actively involved in green house gas emission trading and the development of renewable energies internationally. The Scotian WindFields CEDIFs are currently assessing locations throughout the province to site additional wind turbines and are raising capital in 2007 to further this objective.
