

Continuing Care Strategy

Living well in a place you can call home.

Long-term Care Bed Projects Already Underway

As part of the province's Continuing Care Strategy, 832 new long-term care beds will be built around the province, and nine facilities will be replaced. All of these beds will be ready in 2010.

Some parts of Nova Scotia are facing greater pressures. They need additional relief as quickly as possible. The province is also responding to the needs for more long-term care beds through a number of projects that are already underway. When ready, these beds will give more Nova Scotians more options for the care they need closer to home.

Ready now

- 75 replacement long-term care beds at Richmond Villa
- Access to 26 long-term care beds, in total, at 3 facilities — CND, Taigh na Mara and Taigh Solas — in Cape Breton as they become available
- 6 interim beds at Peter's Place for those with acquired brain injury¹

Ready in summer 2007

- 40 interim long-term care beds at Northwood Manor in Halifax

Ready in winter 2008

- 10 new long-term care beds at Seaview Manor in Cape Breton
- 15 new long-term care beds at Northside Community Guest Home in Cape Breton

Ready in spring 2008

- A 60 bed new residential care facility to replace Westside Villa in Truro²

Ready in late 2009

- A new 150 bed facility in Bedford

Ready in 2010

- 64 new long-term care beds in Cape Breton
- 10 new long-term care beds for francophone communities

¹ Peter's Place is a home in Lunenburg County for those with acquired brain injury. It will become part of Nova Scotia's continuing care system.

² A new residential care facility will open in Truro to replace all 26 beds from Westside Villa and 34 beds from Townsview Estates.